7 MINUTES

Lyrics: Paola Granati

She hears the key opening the door
She hears his footsteps on the floor
She's been through this many times before
And she knows she's up for more.
He calls her name as he walks in Takes off his jacket and cufflinks
Loosens his tie with a grin
And she knows the game begins.

How was your day she asks but she knows
Every day it's the same old show
He drowns his pain in a bottle
And expects her to follow.
She sees his eyes and knows the threat
He slowly sighs and shakes his head
He says their life is a total mess
And she is to blame for that.

7 minutes of insanity
7 minutes of brutality
7 minutes of violence and pleads to let her go

7 minutes that's all he needs
7 minutes and he sees her bleed
7 minutes of hell and she knows

There's a tomorrow
There's hope in tomorrow.

He's satisfied and he looks away
She hears him cry tears of shame
She wants to run from this charade
Before he starts this again.

She looks him straight into the eyes
Feels no compassion for his cries
She stands up with her strength of pride
She walks then she runs then she flies.

7 minutes that's all she needs
7 minutes and she breaks free
From that house, from those chains,
From those pleads to let her go.

7 minutes and he can't believe
How she leaves him in his misery
7 minutes to freedom she goes.

7 minutes that's all you need
7 minutes and you break free
From that house, from those chains, from those pleads and you can go.

7 minutes that's all you need
7 minutes and you break free and go.

There's a tomorrow
Keep walking towards tomorrow
Walk on, walk on
Walk on, walk on
Walk on, walk on
To freedom
Freedom
